First ever 4-H Fashion Review gives kids chance to show off sewing projects

Skirts, drawstring apron, tote bags and a backpack were on display for all to see during the first ever 4-H Fashion Review.

A group of six 4-Hers spent the summer working on their sewing skills in the 4-H sewing program and putting together outfits as part of the 4-H consumer clothing program. During intermission of the Brown County Fair Queen and Princess Pageant the 4-hers had a chance to show off their creations for all to see.

The goal of the review and providing the kids an opportunity to model their creations was to "teach youth skills to present themselves in a professional manner," said Judy Hamilton.

Even though sewing is not an official club in Brown County, Hamilton met with a group of 4-H members — Averi Bohbrink, Kaira Lammers, Ruby Wagers and Annie Stowers along with Mini 4-Hers Owen Bohbrink and Koryan Lammers — monthly to teach them sewing skills and how to apply those to projects, Hamilton said.

A power outage due to a thunderstorm at the time of the pageant caused the location of the Fashion Review — and the pageant — to move next door to the Exhibit Building. "We are extremely proud of how they handled all the changes," Hamilton said. "They are a great group of youth."
